Almonte

Did You Know?

Despite what your navigation app told you on your way here, it's pronounced "Almonte," with a silent "e."

This picturesque town came to be what it is today after an initial boom in the textile industry that lasted until the 1950s.

Today, as you stroll the downtown core, you'll notice the remnants of the textile industry; multiple stone structure mills converted to other uses such as restaurants and galleries, as well as a railway converted into a trail.

The town has since pivoted to becoming the centrepiece for art in the Ottawa Valley. There are a variety of unique galleries, hand-made goods stores, potteries, antique markets, painters guilds, theatre groups, and so much more.

Ramsay

Ramsay Ward is a mix of farming lowlands along the Mississippi River and the more rugged borders of the Canadian Shield. Historically, the Mississippi and Indian Rivers played an important role in the development of the former Township of Ramsay.

Who said visiting out-of-town had to be expensive? On top of our museums that are generally pay-by-donation, there is lots more to see out in the open here in Mississippi Mills.

The Seven Gifts

This installation pays tribute to the Seven Grandfather Teachings of the Algonquin Anishinaabe Peoples. Each stone supports a bronze totem animal representing one of the gifts. Interpretive signage and a commemorative plaque, as well as native plantings with Indigenous significance, completes the sacred space of healing and reflection.

The Lanark County Interval House Pebble Mosaic

Start the Riverwalk trail with the Pebble Mosaic next to the Almonte Old Town Hall. This beautiful collection of intricately combined pebbles honour those affected by gender-based violence and imagines a world without violence. Be sure to check out its sister installations in Carleton Place and Smiths Falls, as well.

Greet the Murals of Mill Street

You don't have to walk far to come face-to-face with a historical figure on Mill Street. In fact, the entire street is covered in murals, high and low! Take a stroll while you shop and see who you can spot – you might learn a new thing or two about them.

Do You Ever Wonder?

Take a glimpse back at your childhood with the sculpture of Gloria Gopher from Under the Umbrella Tree, a CBC favourite TV show from the 1980s. Placed on the Ottawa Valley Recreational Trail beside the Almonte Library, this sculpture honours the show's creator, puppeteer Noreen Young, who calls Almonte home.

The Inventor of Basketball

In the heart of Almonte sits the beloved statue of James Naismith. Take a seat next to him and snap some selfies; you won't find anyone as photogenic as he is.

Heritage Walking Tours

There's no better way of getting to know a place than walking it. Time travel to the founding days of our villages by picking up a copy of our self-guided walking tours at Almonte Old Town Hall. We have one for each village, plus the trails of Almonte.

Pakenham

The first settlers came to this area in 1823, to clear land and build shanties, potash works and mills. This set the stage, circa 1840, for the establishment of the village of Pakenham. This tour takes you back, providing a glimpse of its history.

Trevor Johnston

Downtown Almonte

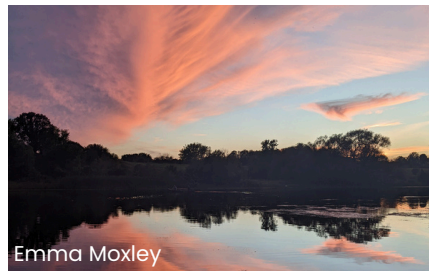

This short walk of the historic downtown area will show you parts of the Almonte that was. Cast your mind back to the mid to late 19th century when the town—dubbed the “Manchester of Canada” — had quickly developed into a thriving centre of Canada's textile industry.

Paul Haining

Trails of Almonte

This walk combines Almonte's Riverwalk with a portion of the Ottawa Valley Recreational Trail (OVRT) to make a loose circuit. Discover Almonte's history in the many interpretive panels that line the way—including its roots in the textile industry —and follow in the footsteps of the textile workers themselves along the Millworkers' Walk.

Emma Moxley

Blakeney

Known previously as Norway Pine Falls, Snedden's Mills, and Rosebank, the village was named Blakeney in 1874. Walkabout and see why this “bay” area on the Mississippi River was quickly recognized as a centre for potential.

Clayton

The first settlers came to this area in the early 1820s. The village of Clayton grew around a grist mill and a saw mill. Later there were stores, hotels, blacksmiths, cobblers, a carding mill, a tannery, a cheese factory, and several other businesses. Take this tour and you'll notice the remnants of a once bustling village.

Appleton

The first settlers came to Appleton in the 1820s and harnessed the natural falls of the Mississippi River to build a community. A sawmill and grist mill were built in 1824 and a blacksmith, a cobbler, a general store, a woollen mill and other businesses soon followed. This tour provides a glimpse of Appleton's history.
